

Review - Holden Colorado LTZ Crew Cab

Written by Wayne Lancaster
Saturday, 09 March 2013 21:33

There have been lots of talk lately about how the popularity of crew cab trucks are on the rise and that people are buying them as they double as a work truck during the day but can double as a family car on the weekend.

So when Holden gave me the keys to a Colorado LTZ crew cab I was really interested in seeing how good it be as a family car.

We all know the Colorado's credentials as a work truck with a sizable tray and a massive 3500kg towing capacity makes it a perfect fit for the work site.

That towing capacity also makes it a perfect fit for families on the weekend specially those who have the need to tow thing like the boat, caravan, jets ski, dirt bike, race car etc.

On the outside it looks big I quite like what Holden has done with the looks of the new model Colorado, had quite a few comments during the week I had it all of them positive seems everybody I talked to loved the look of it.

It's got that I'm a big tough truck look to it and i think it really looks great in this colour Sizzle which is a bright metallic red, being the top of the range LTZ model it's equip with several features including 17" alloy wheels, fog lights, LED tail lights, projector head lights, alloy sports bar side steps, various chrome finishings that set this apart from lower models in the range this truck was also equipped with a locking hard tonneau cover.

Review - Holden Colorado LTZ Crew Cab

Written by Wayne Lancaster
Saturday, 09 March 2013 21:33

