

Review - Audi A3 Sportback

Written by Jason (Neutral)
Sunday, 07 July 2013 22:09

I have always enjoyed driving Audi cars and my personal favorite is the A4. On a recent trip to Cairns I was given a rental upgrade thanks to the guys at Europcar.

There is a whole other story on hire car companies including their offers, rates and insurance but I'll leave that for another day.

So back to the A3. I'm not a fan of the rear of this vehicle, the front and sides are what I personally think are some of the best looking panels on any car in the world today. The front grill is spectacular and the headlights give the car an exotic look.

The A3 comes with a number of wheel options and of course paint options. As with most cars the darker colors really show up the dirt and this one was no exception.

The car had been sitting in the airport car park over night and was filthy when we picked it up. Black may look luxurious but you would have to have a personal detailer on hand to keep this dark color looking good.

I can't blame Audi for this as it is an issue with all dark paint schemes.

Review - Audi A3 Sportback

Written by Jason (Neutral)
Sunday, 07 July 2013 22:09

